23rd International Scientific Conference

25th–27th September, 2024
Milan, Italy

We are pleased to invite you to submit an abstract for the 23rd GTA International Scientific Conference, which will take place on 25th–27th September 2024 at the University of Milano-Bicocca (Milan, Italy).

The conference program will comprise talks, plenary lectures, working groups, and poster sessions.

This year's topic is Mind – Perception – Reality. It aims to focus on one of the central issues of Gestalt psychology and its Italian variant, “experimental phenomenology”: the relationship between the mind and phenomenal reality at the perceptual level – bearing in mind that the conceptualization of reality is a core argument in all domains of psychology. The conference will therefore focus not solely on perception but on all domains of psychological research, including attention, learning, memory, decision making, reasoning, personality, motivation, emotions, clinical psychology, psychotherapy, and communication. The conference will have a distinctly interdisciplinary character, contributions from psychologists, linguists, philosophers, phenomenologists, anthropologists, psychotherapists and psychoanalysts, educational and social scientists, sports scientists, biologists, physicists, science theorists, and artists are welcome. Last but not least, the conference also aims to reflect on the relevance of Gestalt theory today through contributions that put it in dialogue with other contemporary perspectives.

The conference language is mainly English.

Submitted abstracts for oral and poster sessions should contain at most 250 words (no references are allowed). The deadline for submissions is the 30th April 2024. Groups of researchers (4–5 participants) can jointly propose thematic workshops: the deadline for workshop proposals is the 15th April 2024. Decisions on accepted papers will be made by double-blind peer review and will be announced by the 3rd May 2024.
