

In the dust of the healer

Crystal Lemus^a

^a BS (Neuroscience), Medical Student, DeBusk College of Osteopathic Medicine, Lincoln Memorial University, Knoxville, Tennessee, USA

We walked not to be seen, but to see—the wound, the want, the whispered need—feet blistered by obedience, hearts cracked to let the Kingdom bleed.

Faith is no thoughtless fire—it bends through reason's lens, but never breaks; it kneels beside a leper's bed and prays through reason, shivers, shakes.

Service is liturgy in motion, a sacrament beyond the walls—where doctrine meets infection's breath and mercy fills the clinic halls.

I have seen the calculus of grief in charts, in child, in mother's eyes;
but what algorithm counts the cost of one lost sheep the Shepherd buys?

The sterilized and sacred blur—
with latex hands, I touch the soul; Christ in the patient, Christ in me,
one Body broken, made whole.

O Word made flesh in every tongue,
each culture kissed by grace unseen,
Your Gospel walks on dusty roads with water, bread, and vaccine.

The cross is more than symbol here, it splinters into daily bread—where Christ is stitched through every wound and resurrection lifts the dead.

So grant me not a brighter crown than this: to serve where you have knelt, to find You not in strength alone, but where the world's deep hunger's felt.

Let me be small, obscure, unknown—
a shadow in Your healing light, content to be a whispered psalm
You sing into the coming night.

Submitted 10 June 2025, Accepted 17 June 2025, Published August 2025

Competing Interests: None declared.

Cite this article as: Lemus C. In the dust of the healer. Christ J Glob Health. 2025 Aug; 12(2). <https://doi.org/10.15566/cjgh.v12i2.506>

© Author. This is an open-access article distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution License, which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original author and source are properly cited. To view a copy of the license, visit <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/>

