EDITORIAL PREFACE

It is our pleasure to present the second issue of the 15th volume of SEEU Review. The papers published were chosen carefully and with the conviction that they are contributory to the science and research in the respective disciplines. The process of selecting manuscripts has been difficult because the interest to publish in SEEU Review has vividly increased.

The research papers in this issue are in the fields of social sciences, politics, legal sciences, language and literature as well as computer and technological sciences. This issue of the SEEU Review, which the Board of Editors proudly presents for your consideration, tries to give an overview of different issues that are important in these challenging modern times, ranging from the question of the validity of the student evaluations of teaching (SET) to the existing and future challenges in guaranteeing the privacy under the reign of the 'Covid 19' virus in the geographical and psychological space. Some papers illustrate literature issues whereas others deal with contemporary legal challenges of extradition and cybercrime, as well as issues of communication, the process of EU integration and weapons of mass destruction.

The Review is the main scholarly journal of the South East European University, an internationally-oriented higher-education institution located in the Republic of North Macedonia. All contributors have submitted their papers for review on a transparent basis; the reviewers are not paid for their reviews, and are not permitted to know the identity of the contributor(s), whose work they are assessing. The SEEU Review does not, in any way, endorse any of the views presented in these papers—the judgments and arguments made herein are those of the respective authors. Similarly, the SEEU Review operates on the SEEU Review Volume 15 Issue 2 basis of academic good faith and has accepted these papers in the same spirit; the authors are ultimately solely responsible for these papers, which they have submitted as their own.

We hope that the findings of the published articles will contribute to the broadening of your research knowledge.
