

Message from the President-SLOA 2024

Dear Readers and Colleagues,

As the 16th president of the Sri Lanka Orthopaedic association, it is an honour and a privilege to share this message with the Sri Lanka orthopaedic association journals of 2024.

This year along with many academic, clinical training and research events conducted throughout the year, this journal has managed to publish two volumes. We have large amount of clinical material unique to Sri Lanka and the surgeons have gained experience and expertise in managing these conditions through the years. Sharing this with the global orthopaedic fraternity is a key process in our learning and development. This journal works not only as a vehicle to disseminate that knowledge but also spark conversation and challenge conventional practices as it through dialogue that we foster growth and develop our practice. Extremely rare case reports to highest level randomised control trials will all have a role to play in our continues learning process. However, we still have paucity in submissions therefore we invite and encourage all orthopaedic fraternity to submit and publish in this journal.

I congratulate and thank the editor and the editorial board for their tireless work to get two journals published this year. I wish all the success to the editorial team in taking this journal to the highest academic level and I am certain these publications will help to enhance the standard of care in our patients and advance the development of trauma and orthopaedics in the future.

Dr Hiran Amarasekera,
President,
Sri Lanka Orthopaedic Association,
2024
